MISS STARLING'S LETTER

Chieng Mai, Laos, Nov. 1, 1911.—This is the first day of November, and I suppose you are sitting by a good fire. The weather here is delightful, and I don't think we will have much more hot weather. I feel 50 per cent stronger, since it has turned a little cooler; though even now, in the middle of the day, it is very warm. But we have cool nights, and I have to cover up before morning, and put on my coat for a few hours in the morning.

Saturday, I spent seven hours at the typewriter, and got the station report completed, with the exception of a few things that will have to be added after station meeting this afternoon. Dr. Mason says it is the first time since he has been out here (five years) that anyone has gotten up the report on time. But I didn't care to take too many bites at it, so, after much urging, I managed to get the reports from the workers in our station, and fixed it up. Some of these men sat up and rubbed their eyes, when I began to stir them up. I suppose it's out here like it seems to be among preachers the world over—they are too much absorbed in things spiritual to take time for matters of business. It seems that our stations all over the world are more or less remiss in sending their reports to the Board, so the Board needed a letter this fall, saying that they in case in appropriations that would be made this year would be divided among the stations that had their reports in by the first of the year. That letter had been sent around to every member of the station, and yet, when I reminded them of it, no one ever seemed to have heard of it before. However, the letter was in the letter-book, to show for itself. We had one station meeting yesterday, to listen to the reading of the report, which is all ready to go in, with the exception of the needs of the station, which we are to discuss this afternoon. So I shall have to spend to-night finishing that up; consequently, I am writing to you this afternoon.

Mr. Lyle and his bride arrived Sunday. She had fever nearly all the way up the river. I imagine one would get malaria much more quickly coming up river, than overland. The Kerrs were with the Lyles, coming through the rapids, but the latter pushed ahead after that, and got here a day sooner. I haven't seen either of them, yet.

Last week, I got the prettiest hat from England. I don't know when I ever had one I like as well. Most of the women out here wear dressy straw hats, but it is not considered safe in the Orient, and the men all make fun of them for doing it; so I made up my mind that I would put my vanity in my pocket, so far as hats were concerned, and not wear anything but a cork hat. An ordinary hat is not considered enough protection from the tropical sun, and one may have sunstroke. So since I have been out here, I have worn plain cork hats, covered with drill, like the men's. I wasn't able to get a nice one, coming out, and there is no foreign market here. So I thought I would try ordering one from England, and it came by parcel-post last week. The shape is plain flat, and it is covered with pearl-grey broadcloth, with a twisted sash of silk of the same color. It is lined with a pretty shade of green silk, and is very becoming. It was not expensive either, as hats go, and I feel that it is nice enough to wear anywhere in company with dress hats. It really hasn't been such a temptation to go without a dress hat here, as by the time they arrive from America, they are all floppy and banged up. I shouldn't like to be caught wearing some of the hats I have seen out here.

The Bangkok papers are full of the revolution in China; I suppose it will be very serious. I had to laugh over one piece of news in the Bangkok paper: One of the royal elephants has taken a great dislike to the trolley cars, and charges them, every time he sees one. He is taken to the river every morning for his bath, and has recently put one out of commission, and seriously injured another. The motor-men have caught on, and now whenever they see the elephant, they run the car the other way; which upsets the time-table somewhat, but saves the car. This elephant has also taken a great fancy to the rice-cakes in the little shops along the way, and usually takes all in sight, and then wants some more. Isn't this a mingling of savagery and civilization? Such as you will find nowhere save in some of our Oriental cities.

I must stop now, and get my report finished up ready to send off tomorrow. LUCY STARLING.

PEMBROKE R. R. 3.

Buford Johnson, Correspondent

Mrs. M. E. Morton and daughter, Miss Bettie, spent a day or two last week with Mrs. Laura Hall at Allensville.

We suppose the readers of this paper think that we have left this part of the country as our letter has not been in the Kentuckian for three weeks. We have been real busy and could not get up the news.

Miss Pauline Falcher returned about two weeks ago from Bowling Green where she has been in school there.

Miss Ida Mae Wade is spending this week with her grandmother, Mrs. Jane Wilkins near Trenton.

Buford Johnson attended the closing exercises of the Elkton graded school at Elkton last Thursday night.

Mr. Ed Wade now has a saw mill in his body of timber here cutting lumber.

Mr. E. P. Bell and family, of Bell's Chapel, Mr. and Mrs. St. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Adams, of near Trenton and Mrs. Harriet Bell, of Elkton spent Sunday at Mr. Jas. F. Bell's.

Mr. William Lowry, of Missouri, spent several days last week with his niece, Mr. M. E. Morton.

The farmers have all about finished setting tobacco.

Mr. Ed Wade and wife and three children spent Sunday with Mrs. Jane Wilkins near Trenton.

Messrs. Leigh Morton and Charles Shurn attended preaching at Fairview Sunday.

Miss Alma Burns, of Fairview, spent a day or two last week at Mr. R. E. Luchs.

Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Hall spent Friday in Hopkinsville.

Wheat cutting will begin some time next week. It is latter this year than usual.

Given Final Hearing

Frankfort, Ky., June 12.—The State Board of Valuation and Assessment has begun the final hearing of railroad corporations, in protest against the enormous increases placed upon their franchises for taxation this year. The hearings will continue through Tuesday, at which time the tentative assessments of the board will be reviewed and final action taken.

It is not thought about the capital that the State Board will make any substantial reductions in assessments and that the complaining railroads will unite in a suit to test the authority of the State Board, and the justice of the assessment placed upon them by that body.

Board Of Madisonville.

Madisonville, Ky., June 11.—The board of public works, recently created by the council, is composed of J. F. Dempsey, W. J. Dulin and George Finley. They took oath of office today and have entered upon their official duties. The preliminary work for the construction of a $75,000 waterworks system will be attended to at once. Negotiations for a civil engineer to select the site for a lake are under headway.
